His photos, interviews and features about him have been published and presented in numerous media across the world. His biggest success was the 2013 series called The Little Prince, which went viral. The photos have been pronounced as some of the most touching photos ever taken. The following year he was as screenwriter and director for the short film with the same title and received the award Vesna at the main national film festival. Due to his personal and professional ambitions he strives to bring photography as close as possible to the people with special needs. He has cofounded The Institute of photographic therapy where he offers workshops, educates others in the field of the photographic therapy and publishes professional articles.
